Dear Bruce,

In my letter to you of 1 September and my statement to Parliament of 12 September, I set out why the Scottish Government would not be able to recommend that Parliament give its consent to the European Union (Withdrawal) Bill, as it is currently drafted. A particular problem with the Bill is its failure to reflect the principles of devolution. The Scottish Government has been working with the Welsh Government to prepare a set of amendments to the Bill which would, if made, turn the Bill into one that properly respects devolution and ensures that the Scottish Parliament and the National Assembly for Wales do not have their competence restricted by EU withdrawal.

These amendments are attached, along with a note that summarises their purpose and effect. The same amendments have been sent by Professor Mark Drakeford AM, the Cabinet Secretary for Finance and Local Government in the Welsh Government, to Huw Irranca-Davies AM, Chair of the Constitutional and Legislative Affairs Committee.

The restrictions in clause 11 of the Bill apply to many areas of Scottish devolved responsibility vital to the success of our country, such as agriculture, the environment, fisheries, forestry, research, or justice co-operation. The restrictions have the effect that the Scottish Parliament would have no say over what is done with these important policy areas after EU withdrawal.

There is considerable interest in the over 100 areas that I indicated were affected by these restrictions. I have therefore annexed to this letter a working summary of these areas, in order to inform your consideration of these matters. I should be clear that the list represents an initial assessment by the UK Government of where EU competences intersect with devolution and which therefore would be affected by the restrictions in the Bill.

The UK Government prepared the list in order to inform discussion between the Scottish and UK Governments about where it may be necessary to agree common frameworks.

The Scottish Government is clear that any policy areas within devolved competence, carried out at EU level, should return to the Scottish Parliament in the event the UK leaves the EU. Given the way the European Union (Withdrawal) Bill is drafted, the extent of the list presented to the Scottish Government illustrates the scale of potential UK Government control over devolved policy areas.

As I made clear in my statement, the Scottish Government recognises that there may be the need for frameworks in the future and we are in discussion with the UK Government and the other devolved administrations to agree how such consideration might be taken forward. We will, however, only be able to agree frameworks based on respect for devolution, including the existing well established arrangements for co-operation, and not on the basis of the Bill as it stands.

MICHAEL RUSSELL
